

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Prior to the implementation of this law, I received 20 calls per week (avg. of 4 per evening), all of which usually came during supper time. Now I receive NO unwanted telemarket or sales calls. If any new federal regulation for such communication is proposed, I would hope that it would not "water down" in any fashion the strength of our Indiana law.